Brand New and Pre-Loved

AIYUN HUANG percussion

Jane Mallett Theatre, St. Lawrence Centre for the Arts

DEAR CITIZENS OF PLANET EARTH

Big Bang! is Andrew Staniland's percussion concerto celebrating the International Year of Astronomy 2009. It offers us the musical equivalent of the incredible density and heat, exponential expansion, red shift and blue shift of the first moments of our Universe. Aiyun Huang will give an out of this world performance as percussion soloist. While we perform, Andrew will be in the mountains in Banff as a finalist in Evolution, a re-designed version of the CBC Young Composers Competition.

Bruce Mather's Hommage à John Hawkins is a work of elegant transparency, clarity of thought and refined poignancy. Its musical essence conveys Bruce's following comments – "It is common that an artist enjoys success for a few years and then is forgotten. As painful as this is for the artist concerned, it is usually not a great loss for society as he (or she) is soon replaced by another artist of equal value. The case of John Hawkins is different, as he was uncommonly talented."

I was introduced to Dutch composer Mayke Nas (self-described "composer, searcher, slow-food cook, Bach fugue player") last year in Amsterdam. Her jaunty La Belle Chocolatière is named after the famous Droste-cacao-tin from 1900 with the image of a handsome nurse on it that holds a tin of cacao, with the image of the same nurse that ... etc. She writes – "The piece is an attempt to see a piano piece of Debussy from that time (Mouvement from Images I – 1903) through a Droste-microscope."

Omar Daniel's Trope is in the context of Medieval Chant: 'the composition of a new melody [and text], which is then sung together with a traditional chant in various ways, e.g., before and/or after it, or by alternation of the phrases of the trope with those of the original chant.' Omar borrows from some of his earlier pieces to form the 'traditional chant' of his Trope and then, like crazy, interpolates, layers, elaborates, fragments, threads, magnifies and embellishes old and new material to give us musical excitement.

BEST REGARDS, ALEX PAUK music director and conductor
Make sure you join us at 7:15 pm for the pre-concert chat with Bruce and Omar.
We're working on beaming Andrew in from The Rockies via satellite.
